1 must be both not relevant to the charges and prejudicial to the defense. United States v.
 2 Laurienti, 611 F.3d 530, 546-47 (9th Cir. 2010). Here, the defendants fail to establish
 3 that they would suffer any prejudice as a result of the language in the indictment because,
 4 as this Court well knows, the standard practice in this District is for the indictment not to 5 be read or provided to the jury at trial. Assuming the Court follows this practice in the 6 instant case, as the government would request, there could be no prejudice to the 7 defendants as a result of the inclusion of these paragraphs in the Indictment. Therefore,
 8 the Court should deny the motion.

9 II. Legal Standards Governing Motions to Strike Surplusage.

10 Rule 7(d) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure provides that “[t]he Court on 11 motion of the defendant may strike surplusage from the indictment or information.” Fed.
 12 R. Crim. P. 7(d). The proper purpose of a motion to strike under Rule 7(d) is “to protect 13 a defendant against prejudicial or inflammatory allegations that are neither relevant nor 14 material to the charges.” Laurienti, 611 F.3d at 546-47 (quoting United States v.
 15 Terrigno, 838 F.2d 371, 373 (9th Cir. 1988)). See United States v. Ramirez, 710 F.2d
 16 535, 544-45 (9th Cir. 1983). In order to support a motion to strike surplusage, the 17 defendant must show that the language in the indictment is both irrelevant to the charges
 18 and prejudicial. United States v. Laurienti, 611 F.3d at 546-47. See United States v.
 19 Hedgepeth, 434 F.3d 609, 612 (3d Cir. 2006) (“[T]he court may strike surplusage from 20 the indictment or information when it is both irrelevant (or immaterial) and prejudicial.
 21 Logic demands the conjunctive standard: information that is prejudicial, yet relevant to 22 the indictment, must be included for any future conviction to stand and information that
 23 is irrelevant need not be struck if there is no evidence that the defendant was prejudiced 24 by its inclusion.”) (emphasis added).

25
 26
 27
 28 Motorola (¶ 38); and a Huawei bonus program designed to reward Huawei employees for stealing confidential information from competitors (¶¶ 47-48).

1 Rule 7(d) should be “strictly construed against striking surplusage.” United States
 2 v. Ali Razaq, 134 F.3d 1121, 1134 (D.C. Cir. 1998) (citation omitted). Whether to strike
 3 language in an indictment as surplusage is committed to the discretion of the trial court,
 4 and denial of a motion to strike surplusage is reviewed on appeal for abuse of discretion.
 5 Laurienti, 611 at 546-47; Terrigno, 838 F.2d at 373.

7 III. The Court Should Deny the Motion Because there will be no Prejudice if the Indictment is Not Read or Provided to the Jury.

9 When an indictment is not read or provided to the jury, the allegations therein – no
 10 matter how salacious – cannot not possibly prejudice the jury’s deliberations against the 11 defendant. Hedgepeth, 434 F.3d at 612 (“In the absence of any evidence that the jury
 12 was exposed to the [] indictment, Hedgepeth’s claim of prejudice fails before it leaves the 13 gate, as information never revealed to the jury could not have prejudiced its 14 deliberations.”). Assuming that this Court does not intend to read or provide the 15 indictment to the jury in the instant case, the Court should deny the defendants’ motion
 16 because the jury will not be prejudiced by any of the allegations in the indictment. Id.
 17 (“information that is irrelevant need not be struck [from an indictment] if there is no
 18 evidence that the defendant was prejudiced by its inclusion.”).

19 In recognition of this principle, district courts routinely have denied motions to 20 strike surplusage when the indictment is not provided or read verbatim (or at all) to the 21 jury. As one court has explained:

22 Allegations in the indictment that are never read to the jury are not 23 prejudicial and therefore need not be stricken. . . . While some courts have 24 a practice of providing a copy of the indictment, or reading it verbatim to 25 the jury, this Court does not. The Court, according to its usual practice,
 26 will not give a copy of the indictment to the jurors, and will screen
 27 irrelevant, prejudicial material from the jury, including any unnecessary 28 contents of the indictment. There is, therefore, no surplusage in the indictment. Issues regarding what the jury will see or hear can be resolved at trial or by motions in limine.

1 United States v. Ballard, 2007 WL 4365499 *2 (E.D. Ca. 2007) (citing Hedgepeth, 434
 2 F.3d at 613). See e.g., United States v. Prejean, 429 F.Supp.2d 782, 796-97 (E.D. La.
 3 2006) (denying motion, in part, because the indictment “will not be read to the jury
 4 during the trial”; instead, a non-prejudicial summary of the indictment would be read);
 5 United States v. Nacchio, 2006 WL 2475282 *5 (D. Colo. 2006) (“In light of the fact that
 6 this court does not make a practice of reading the entire indictment to the jury at the 7 outset of trial, the inclusion of this material in the indictment is not prejudicial nor does
 8 inclusion suspend the rules of evidence.”); United States v. Watters, 2010 WL 3369844
 9 *1 (N.D. Ohio 2010) (“With regard to the motion to strike surplusage from the 10 indictment, I believe that motion is moot. It is not my practice to read the indictment or 11 otherwise provide it to the jury. . . . That being so, striking some portion of the 12 indictment is not necessary.”); United States v. Islamic American Relief Agency, 2009
 13 WL 3062176 *1 (W.D. Mo. 2009) (“Because the Court controls the language read to the 14 jury, including the language of an indictment, the Court can address Defendants’
 15 concerns by the manner in which the Court reads the Indictment to the jury.”); United 16 States v. Gross, 2008 WL 4559851 *6 (E.D. Wash. 2008) (noting that “as a general rule, 17 surplusage in an indictment is simply ignored,” and denying motion, in part, because 18 indictment was not read to the jury) (citing United States v. Heck, 499 F.2d 778, 792 (9th 19 Cir. 1974)); United States v. Poulsen, 2008 WL 4326461 *8 (S.D. Ohio 2008) (denying 20 motion to strike surplusage because indictment would not be provided to jury and the 21 prejudicial portions of the indictment would be omitted during the court’s reading of the 22 indictment); United States v. Bordewick, 2007 WL 4287333 *4 (N.D. Cal. 2007)
 23 (“Allegations in the indictment that are never read to the jury are not prejudicial and 24 therefore need not be stricken.”) (citing Hedgepeth, 434 F.3d at 613).

25 Not surprisingly, the decisions cited by the defendants in which courts granted
 26 motions to strike surplusage appear to involve cases in which the indictment was read
 27 and/or provided to the jury at trial. See, e.g. United States v. Vastola, 670 F. Supp. 1244,
 28

1 1255 (D. N.J. 1987) (“[T]he court is concerned with the prejudicial effect on the jury of
 2 listening to the judge recite this [indictment] preamble at the opening of the case.”)
 3 (original emphasis); United States v. Poindexter, 725 F. Supp. 13, 35 (D.D.C. 1989)
 4 (noting that the language of the indictment “could improperly indicate to a jury” that 5 defendants had been charged with other offenses); United States v. Hubbard, 474 F.
 6 Supp. 64, 82-83 (same); United States v. Gerlay, 2009 WL 3872143 (D. Alaska 2009)
 7 (same).

8 Here, assuming the Court does not read or provide the Indictment to the jury, then
 9 there could be no prejudice to the defendants as a result of any of the language contained
 10 therein. Therefore, there is no need for the Court to strike any portions of the Indictment 11 as surplusage, and the motion should be denied.

12 In disposing of the defendants’ motion, the Court need not address the second
 13 element of surplusage – whether the language in the indictment is relevant to the charges
 14 – because the defendants entirely fail to establish the first element – prejudice. As a 15 result, the government will not address the issue of relevancy herein. Instead, the 16 government will set forth the various reasons why the allegations in paragraphs 38, 47,
 17 and 48 are relevant to the charges in this case when it responds substantively to the 18 defendant’s separate motion to exclude this evidence at trial. See Defendant’s Motion to 19 Exclude Irrelevant and Prejudicial Evidence at Trial (Dkt. 53).

IV. Conclusion.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Plaintiff,

NO. CR19-010RSM

ORDER DENYING MOTION TO STRIKE SURPLUSAGE

HUAWEI DEVICE CO., LTD.,
HUAWEI DEVICE USA, INC.,
Defendants.

The Court, having considered the parties' briefing and the relevant record on the Defendants' Motion to Strike Surplusage (Dkt. 55), HEREBY denies the motion. The Court intends to follow this District's standard practice of not reading or providing the Indictment to the jury at trial. As a result, none of the language in the Indictment could result in any prejudice to the Defendants, and therefore none of it need be stricken as surplusage.

DATED this ____ day of August, 2019.

Chief United States District Judge
